Parents as Teachers at Shiloh House

Parents as Teachers (PAT) at Shiloh House is an evidence-based home visiting program for all families with children from prenatal to kindergarten age. Shiloh's trained parent educators partner with families to promote school readiness through parent-child activities, discussing parenting strategies, and supporting family well-being. Shiloh House offers this program free of charge to families.

Families receive:

Personal Visits

- Monthly or bimonthly visits in the home
- Age appropriate child development activities and parenting information
- Opportunities to increase parent knowledge of child development and to improve parenting practices

Group Connections

- Monthly group events and family activities

Child Screenings

- Developmental and health screenings to provide early detection
